

The Protagonist Has No Name A True Story

By -

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 128 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.3in. This is the true story of a near forty year span of my life. As an abused gay adolescent who was desperate for a better life, I ran away with a man who I would discover was twenty years my senior and a drug dealer. My story outlines a desperate journey through domestic violence, drug addiction, betrayal, my brother's suicide and his suspected involvement in a celebrity sibling's murder. It was four years of hiding from parents, police and reality. You'll be led through the challenges of my survival while I was simultaneously coming out in the gay community at fifteen during the 1970s. After being subjected to violent parents and a drug-crazed lover, life becomes a series of relationships pervaded by deceit, death and self-compromising. Follow me through the laughter and tears and discover why the protagonist has no name. Author book proceeds are donated to The Trevor Project. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.

Reviews

This is an awesome publication I have at any time read. Of course, it is play, still an interesting and amazing literature. You will like just how the author wrote this book.

-- Prof. Herta Mann

I actually started out reading this article ebook. This is for those who state that there had not been a worth reading. It's been developed in an extremely easy way and it is just after I finished reading this book in which in fact modified me, change the way I really believe.
