Excerpt from The Fundamental Principles Involved in Dr. Edward Caird s Philosophy of Religion: Inaugural-Dissertation, Zur Erlangung Der Doktorwürde Der Hönen Philosophischen Fakultät Der Friedrich-Alexanders-Universität Erlangen The Caird brothers have been recognized for nearly a generation as belonging to the ranks of the most important Scotch philosophers. John Caird, the elder of the two, was principal of the University of Glasgow. Edward, the author of the work here reviewed, was for some time professor of Moral Philosophy in the same university. Afer resigning this position, he became master of Balliol College, Oxford, which position he filled until quite recently. Previous to the appear ance of this work, he had proven his ability as a philosopher by his Critical Philosophy of Kant, and The Social Philosophy and Religion of Comte. The work here discussed is recognized by friends and foes as one of the clearest and most representative statements of the views of anglo-hegelians. The work has been widely read, and the in uence of the lectures was so great that none but Hegelians were chosen for some time afterwards to deliver...
