

Strategy for Integrated Development of Arunachal Pradesh

By Surya Pal Shukla

Mittal Publications, New Delhi, 2006. N.A. Condition: New. viii, 170 p., ill. ,Even though the country has a Planning Commission, chaired by the Prime Minister and a wholetime Deputy Chairman, often the micro regions, like Arunachal Pradesh, do not find their due focus and the priority, they do so badly need and so abundantly deserve. The treatise in hand tries to fill that void. The book focuses on the development issues of the micro-region and brings the pearls of wisdom out of the imbroglia of development milieu of the state under reference. It is expected to assist the Planning bodies, administrators, planners, educators and teachers in projecting the development issues and also in suggesting viable and practical solutions. The seventh chapter examines the various government planning models/schemes and goes on to suggest the most comprehensive, technically sound and easy to implement, model for the development of the state in coming years and decades. The book being the outcome of years of research evolves an all encompassing approach to numerous issues, which are often unique to the region, tries to unfold even the problems that are very specific and special to this hill state of India.
